SUBIECTUL I

(30 de puncte)

A. Consider the following text:

I had terrible reflections upon my mind for many months, as I have already observed, on account of my wicked and hardened life past; and when I looked about me, and considered what particular providences had attended me since my coming into this place, and how God had dealt bountifully with me — had not only punished me less than my iniquity had deserved, but had so plentifully provided for me — this gave me great hopes that my repentance was accepted, and that God had yet mercy in store for me.

With these reflections I worked my mind up, not only to a resignation to the will of God in the present disposition of my circumstances, but even to a sincere thankfulness for my condition; and that I, who was yet a living man, ought not to complain, seeing I had not the due punishment of my sins; that I enjoyed so many mercies which I had no reason to have expected in that place; that I ought never more to repine at my condition, but to rejoice, and to give daily thanks for that daily bread, which nothing but a crowd of wonders could have brought; that I ought to consider I had been fed even by a miracle, even as great as that of feeding Elijah by ravens, nay, by a long series of miracles; and that I could hardly have named a place in the uninhabitable part of the world where I could have been cast more to my advantage; a place where, as I had no society, which was my affliction on one hand, so I found no ravenous beasts, no furious wolves or tigers, to threaten my life; no venomous creatures, or poisons, which I might feed on to my hurt; no savages to murder and devour me. In a word, as my life was a life of sorrow one way, so it was a life of mercy another; and I wanted nothing to make it a life of comfort but to be able to make my sense of God's goodness to me, and care over me in this condition, be my daily consolation; and after I did make a just improvement on these things, I went away, and was no more sad. I had now been here so long that many things which I had brought on shore for my help were either quite gone, or very much wasted and near spent.

Biodiversity – the variety of life on Earth – makes our planet (1) (HABITAT) and beautiful. Many of us look to the natural environment for pleasure, inspiration or recreation. We also depend on it for food, energy, raw materials, air and water – the elements that make life as we know it possible and drive our economies. Yet despite its unique value, we often take nature for granted. The (2) (PRESS) on many natural systems are growing, causing them to function less (3) (EFFECT) or even taking them to the brink of collapse. Biodiversity loss, as we call it, is an all too common (4) (OCCUR). This is why the European Union is committed to halting biodiversity loss. Over the last 25 years, the EU has built up a network of 26 000 protected areas within its borders, covering more than 850 000 km². Known as Natura 2000, it is the largest network of protected areas in the world, and a testament to the importance we attach to biodiversity. We are determined to (5) (STRONG) this landmark programme with further long-term.
